Living Roof Stewardship

Woodrow Wilson High School

May 1, 2013
We are beginning to see improvements in plant health and coverage on this installation in quick order.
The bright yellow patches are the blooms of the early flowering Sedum floriferum.
There are not many of the accent Allium present on the roof, but this plant has a tendency to self seed readily.
Weed pressure was low on our visit with just a few weeds present in areas of bare media. Pictured here is a patch of horseweed.
We will see changes in blooms and colors throughout the growing season.
We expect achieve full coverage on this project by the end of the growing season.
